

Madulammoho Quick Facts

- Madulammoho, a non-profit (Section 21) social housing institution, was established in 2004 to provide transitional and communal housing to Johannesburg's inner city.
- Madulammoho (Sesotho for "living together") is home to more than 2,400 low-income tenants living in Johannesburg's inner city. Our tenants are singles and families—but we house only South African citizens.
- Madulammoho currently operates seven housing projects, totaling over 950 housing units across Johannesburg's inner city.
- Madulammoho creates opportunities for residents to engage in sports and recreational activities, such as boxing, soccer, karate and aerobics.
- Madulammoho's very own B.G. Alexander is home to a genuine Cruyff Court. Donated by the Netherlands National Football Team, the five-a-side soccer pitch was christened the Orange Cruyff Court Hillbrow and was officially opened by the Dutch team just before the kick-off to the 2010 FIFA World Cup.
- Madulammoho, with its partner Metro Evangelical Services (MES), operates a 72-hour emergency shelter, a crèche facility and training and assessment centers for the organizations' low-income clients.
- In 2008-2009 Madulammoho was the recipient of the Platinum Impumelelo Award for Innovative Work in the Field of Poverty Reduction and Community Development; the Johannesburg Development Agency's Halala Joburg Award: 'Living Joburg – Property Management and Affordable Housing'; and the Govan Mbeki Award for Best Social Housing Institution of the Year: Gauteng.
- Former President, Thabo Mbeki has made official visits to Madulammoho projects.
